5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

Philadelphia DA Larry Krasner on Tuesday delivered something many Black Lives Matter protesters have long demanded — and what the police union claimed was a sign of an "anti-law enforcement" agenda: Murder charges were filed against ex-Philly cop Ryan Pownall, who fatally shot David Jones in the back in June 2017. As of press time, Pownall was expected to be held without bail. His lawyer said he will be cleared of all charges, but a grand jury convened by Krasner found in its report that Pownall shot Jones "for no reason." Read more inside and on metrophilly.us.

KYL TO REPLACE MCCAIN, BOOSTING CONSERVATIVES

1 Former U.S. Republican Sen. Jon Kyl is Arizona Gov. Doug Ducey's pick to fill the U.S. Senate seat from Arizona vacated by John McCain, who died last month, the governor said on Tuesday. The appointment brings a more conservative bent to the Senate given Kyl's voting record and how it veers from that of McCain, a maverick who sometimes collaborated with Democrats on major legislation. Once he is formally installed in the Senate, Kyl's first major vote is likely to be on the confirmation of Brett Kavanaugh to the U.S. Supreme Court. Kyl, now a lobbyist at the law firm Covington & Burling, already has been working behind the scenes to boost Kavanaugh's prospects. He would provide more of a cushion to a Republican victory in the deeply divided Senate given that McCain had been too sick all year to cast votes in Washington. "Kyl tended to be more conservative than McCain throughout his tenure in the Senate," Mark Jones, a political science professor at Rice University in Houston, said in a telephone interview. Kyl, 76, served with McCain in the Senate and rose to become Republican whip.

US WARNS SYRIA ON CHEMICAL WEAPON USE

2 With Syria apparently on the brink of a new spasm of violence, the White House warned on Tuesday that the United States and its allies would respond "swiftly and appropriately" if Syrian President Bashar al-Assad used chemical weapons again. The White House also said in a statement that it was closely monitoring developments in Syria's rebel-held Idlib region, where the Syrian government is expected to mount an offensive that could spark a humanitarian disaster. President Donald Trump in the past year and a half has twice ordered U.S.-led air strikes against targets in Syria in response to what Washington called the Assad government's use of chemical weapons against civilians. In a tweet on Monday, Trump warned Assad and his allies Iran and Russia not to "recklessly attack" Idlib province and warned that hundreds of thousands of people could be killed. The Kremlin on Tuesday dismissed Trump's warning to Syria not to launch an offensive in Idlib, saying the area was a "nest of terrorism."

GORDON STRENGTHENS, CHURNS TOWARD US GULF

4 Tropical Storm Gordon hurled rough surf, high winds and heavy rain at the U.S. Gulf Coast on Tuesday, strengthening as it spun toward the northern U.S. Gulf Coast, potentially to make landfall as a hurricane. Gordon was forecast to come ashore between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. local time on Tuesday along the Mississippi Gulf Coast near the Louisiana state line as a Category 1 hurricane on the five-step Saffir-Simpson scale. Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards declared a state of emergency and companies cut 9 percent of U.S. Gulf of Mexico oil and gas production. "I'm asking all residents to do their part in getting ready for this storm," New Orleans Mayor LaToya Cantrell said in a statement. "The city's absolute No.1 priority is to ensure the safety of our residents." Winds of about 70 miles per hour were expected to reach hurricane force of at least 74 mph by the time the storm reaches the Gulf Coast, and some areas still recovering from last year's storms could see 12 inches of rain. Beaches around Mobile, Ala., were being washed by storm-driven waves on Tuesday morning, said meteorologist Stephen Miller.

WOODWARD BOOK: TRUMP WANTED ASSAD KILLED

5 President Donald Trump wanted to have Syrian President Bashar al-Assad assassinated last year but his defense secretary ignored the request, according to a new book that depicts top Trump aides sometimes disregarding presidential orders to limit what they saw as damaging and dangerous behavior. Excerpts from the book, "Fear: Trump in the White House," written by famed Watergate reporter Bob Woodward, were published by the Washington Post on Tuesday. The book, which is scheduled for release on Sept. 11, is the latest to detail tensions within the White House under Trump's 20-month-old presidency. "It's just another bad book," Trump told the Daily Caller. The book portrays Trump as prone to profane outbursts and impulsive decision-making, painting a picture of chaos that Woodward says amounts to an "administrative coup d'etat" and a "nervous breakdown" of the executive branch. According to the book, Trump told Defense Secretary Jim Mattis that he wanted to have Assad assassinated after the Syrian president launched a chemical attack on civilians in April 2017.

Chaos grips Day 1 of Kavanaugh Senate hearing for Supreme Court

Day 1 of the hearing was highlighted by protests and dissension.

GETTY IMAGES

Chaos engulfed the U.S. Senate confirmation hearing for Brett Kavanaugh, President Donald Trump's Supreme Court pick, as Democrats on Tuesday complained bitterly about Republicans withholding documents about the nominee's past White House service and shouting protesters were arrested in droves.

More than seven hours went by during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing before Kavanaugh, the conservative federal appeals court judge Trump selected for a lifetime job on the top U.S. judicial body, got to deliver his opening statement.

Kavanaugh, nominated by a president who has often criticized the federal judiciary, told the senators that "a judge must be independent, not swayed by public pressure. Our independent judiciary is the crown jewel of our constitutional republic."

With Democratic senators repeatedly interrupting the committee's Republican chairman Chuck Grassley at the outset of the hearing, the session quickly became a ruckus. U.S. Capitol police said 61 protesters were removed from the room and charged with disorderly conduct, along with nine more outside the hearing.

Democrats decried the withholding of the documents and sought to have the proceedings adjourned, as Grassley struggled to maintain order.

"This is the first confirmation for a Supreme Court justice I've seen, basically, according to mob rule," Republican Sen. John Cornyn said, a characterization Democrats rejected.

"A good judge must be an umpire — a neutral and impartial arbiter who favors no litigant or policy."
Brett Kavanaugh

"What we've heard is the noise of democracy," Democratic Sen. Dick Durbin said.

Protesters, mostly women, took turns yelling as senators spoke, shouting, "This is a travesty of justice," "Our democracy is broken" and "Vote no on Kavanaugh." Demonstrators voiced concern about what they saw as the threat posed by Kavanaugh to abortion rights, health care access and gun control.

Kavanaugh sat, fingers intertwined, quietly staring ahead at committee members as protesters in the audience screamed while being dragged out of the room. He occasionally jotted notes on paper.

When he finally got to speak, Kavanaugh called the Supreme Court "the last line of defense for the separation of powers (in the U.S. government), and the rights and liberties guaranteed by the Constitution."

As the hearing paused for a lunch break, Fred Guttenberg, whose daughter who was killed in the Parkland, Florida, high school mass shooting in February, tried to talk to Kavanaugh but the nominee turned away. Video of the encounter was shared widely on social media.

First Philly cop in 20 years to face homicide charges for dirt-biker's shooting

The Philly DA announced that ex-cop Ryan Pownall will face murder charges for shooting David Jones in the back.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

One of the highest-profile fatal police shootings in recent Philadelphia history will lead to the first murder charges against a Philly cop in two decades.

Ryan Pownall, a white Philly ex-cop who was fired in September 2017 after fatally shooting black dirt-biker David Jones, 30, in the back as Jones ran away unarmed, was charged on Tuesday with murder generally, possession of an instrument of crime and recklessly endangering another person, Philadelphia DA Larry Krasner announced. As of press time, Pownall was being held without bail.

The charges were based on a grand jury investigation of the controversial case, which was followed by numerous protests throughout the Philadelphia region, including on the street outside Pownall's house. Pownall was fired by Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross in September 2017, three months after the shooting, for violating departmental policy during the shooting.

Pownall killed Jones on June 8 after a traffic stop, which occurred while Pownall was driving a father and his two children to the Special Victims Unit to report an alleged sex crime.

According to the grand jury investigation, Jones dropped his gun and fled, as Pownall fired twice more at him from behind, from 10 and 35 feet away, striking him fatally in the back and buttocks. Surveillance video showed Jones running before being shot.

"There was no reason or necessity for Pownall to shoot Jones, let alone fire at his back until he went down," the investigatory grand jury's report recommending charges stated. "For no reason, Pownall fired his gun in the direction of traffic, endangering other people. Jones was no danger to anyone in his flight. His death was not necessary to secure his apprehension — an apprehension that would never have been necessary if Pownall had not incited the confrontation."

Pownall's wife and brother appeared at a press conference at Fraternal Order of Police Lodge #5 on Tuesday.

Brother Edward Pownall described the family as feeling "horribly saddened and disturbed ... that this case is even being made against my brother. He loves being an officer, he's a great person. We look forward to bringing Ryan home."

Attorney Fortunato Perri Jr. said Pownall was "legally justified" in the Jones shooting.

"He encountered someone who was armed with an unlawful pistol, who pulled that pistol from his waist, a struggle ensued," Perri said. "He was legally completely justified in his action and he will be exonerated of all charges."

FOP Lodge #5 president John McNesby said the murder indictment was meritless and "illustrates DA Krasner's anti-law-enforcement agenda."

"Right now there's no accountability anywhere," McNesby said at FOP's press conference. "We have criminals walking out the back door of police districts and detectives divisions."

Krasner said at a press conference Tuesday that this is believed to be the first time a Philadelphia police officer had been charged with murder since the 1998 shooting of Donta Dawson, for which officer Chris DiPasquale was charged with manslaughter. A judge later dismissed those charges.

Making it easier (and cheaper) to manage medication as we age

Illuminated Hearts

ASK ILLUMINATED HEARTS:

Experts say that over 50 percent of older adults take five or more medications every day—but most aren't taking them the way they should. Keeping up with prescription and over-the-counter medicines often becomes a difficult task as we age. Illuminated Hearts, a Philadelphia home-care provider, provides services to help manage medication and even pay for prescriptions.

As we age, why does it become challenging to manage our medications ourselves?

It does get tricky because as most people age, the number of medicines that they have to take on a regular basis increases. It gets even more complicated because the names of some medications can look very similar to one another. On top of that, some are hard to remember if they're generic.

Do many older folks struggle with it?

Yes, mainly because they have to know how to safely manage them. For instance, certain medications need to be taken with food, while others have to be taken on an empty stomach. Similarly, some medications can't be taken together or must be taken at specific times of day, which can be really confusing to patients. Many older individuals struggle to keep track of times and remember to take medication consistently.

What kind of medication management services does Illuminated Hearts provide?

At Illuminated Hearts, our caregivers are trained to identify medication and remind clients to take them properly. They essentially take the guesswork out of the equation. Our staff can also manage refills, pick up medication, and schedule appointments for evaluation. Older individuals in particular tend to need assistance with these tasks since managing daily activities gets more difficult as we age.

What about paying for prescriptions?

Those who are eligible for home health services may qualify for state-based medical insurance. This results in low- to no-cost payments for medications. For clients who do not receive state funding, our client assistance representative lends a hand with financial management services that can help clients budget better for their medications.

Interested in medication management for yourself or someone you love? Illuminated Hearts is located at 2231 Bryn Mawr Avenue. Learn more by visiting www.ICareForPA.com or calling (215) 921-6624.

To celebrate the start of the new season with Thursday's home opener against the Atlanta Falcons at Lincoln Financial Field, the city is hosting a free, daylong festival — the 2018 NFL Kickoff Experience — to celebrate the coming season and honor the Eagles' incredible Super Bowl victory yet again.

There will be music performances by Daya, Locash and Shawn Mendes, and the entire Super Bowl LII will be rebroadcast as well. Eagles legends are also expected to appear at the festival.

Pretty much everything Eagles-related will be celebrated during the festival on Penn's Landing — except for the kickoff game itself, which will not be broadcast at the festival.

Your spellcheck might not be happy with the new words that Merriam-Webster has added this year. ISTOCK

From 'avo' to 'zuke,' Merriam-Webster adds 840 words to its dictionary

Sorry, spellcheck: "Hangry," "bougie" and "guac" are among the hundreds of new words Merriam-Webster has added to its roster this year.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

If you regularly use words like "adorbs," "bougie," "zoodles," "hangry," "hophead," "GOAT," "avo" or its cousin "guac," you're in luck because they've officially arrived — by being added to the online version of the Merriam-Webster Dictionary.

"The one constant of a vibrant living language is change, and English has never been more alive than it is today," said Peter Sokolowski, editor-at-large at Merriam-Webster. "In this age of fast communication and technological and scientific advances, we continuously encounter new ways of describing the world around us — and the dictionary is a record of these changes."

That's exactly what Merriam-Webster has been doing since its founding 187 years ago, when it's not winning the internet and social media by sharing on-point GIFs and keeping its finger on the pulse of today's ever-changing world for its thousands of followers.

"As lexicographers, we are constantly tracking the ever-expanding lexicon, only defining the words that have demonstrated the kind of widespread, sustained and meaningful use that shows they've become fully established members of the language," said Associate Editor Emily Brewster. "Meanwhile, the language continues to do what it's been doing for as long as it's existed: grow and adapt to meet the needs of the people who use it."

This year's new words list from Merriam-Webster covers everything from science and technology ("fintech," "biohacking") to food and drink ("zoodles," "mocktail") to social issues and gender identity ("tent city," "Latinx").

Stolen ruby slippers used in 'Wizard of Oz' recovered by FBI

A pair of ruby slippers worth millions that were featured in the movie "The Wizard of Oz" and stolen from a Judy Garland museum 13 years ago have been recovered in Minneapolis, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said on Tuesday.

The FBI said it was asking the public to help identify suspects connected with the original theft and a more recent scheme to extort money from the owners of the red sequined shoes, one of four pairs worn by Judy Garland, who played Dorothy in the 1939 classic. REUTERS

PEOPLE PLAYING LOUD MUSIC AT THE GYM!

We have all read articles about how exercise is part of a healthy lifestyle. And so we join gyms and health clubs — only to have our audial health assaulted by the overly loud and completely unnecessary music (I'm being generous by calling it music) blaring over the loudspeakers throughout the facility. A quick look around any gym will reveal that 90 percent or more of members are listening to their own devices while working out, making the piped-in music an intrusion. The high volume level of the music being piped in causes the members to turn their personal devices up to levels that are probably causing damage just so they can hear it. I wear earplugs at the gym so as to block out all the ambient sound and, when using machines with TVs on them, I turn on the closed-captioning feature so I can read what's being said rather than compete with the cacophony by trying to hear it through headphones. I also stopped taking classes years ago because I could not stand the loud music that the instructors seem to think is so necessary. Staffers at the gym will tell you that the music helps keep your energy up, but I don't rely on their music for energy or motivation. They should limit the noise to the classes and spare the rest of us.

Kaitlin Olson explains why a long break made 'It's Always Sunny In Philadelphia' better

After a year-and-a-half break, the hit comedy series returns tonight.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

Kaitlin Olson gives us the scoop on the new season of "It's Always in Philadelphia." ALL PHOTOS BY FXX

When "It's Always Sunny In Philadelphia" returns to television with its 13th season Wednesday, viewers will immediately notice some big changes to the popular FXX series.

For starters, Dennis Reynolds (Glenn Howerton) has been doubly replaced by a visually similar sex doll that was ordered by Mac (Rob McElhenney) and professional scammer Cindy (Mindy Kaling). Throw in a few obvious references to the current political climate in America (like the premiere episode title, "The Gang Makes Paddy's Great Again") and you've got the makings of another great season of "It's Always Sunny."

Kaitlin Olson, who has played Deandra "Sweet Dee" Reynolds since the very beginning, thinks the show's return to form has everything to do with the yearlong break everyone took between seasons 12 and 13.

"It was great that we took a break for a year because we just really, really needed one," she explains. "Everyone was so excited and enthusiastic to come back after taking a year off to do this season. Everything is fresh and exciting again. I mean, that being said, these are like my favorite people in the world. It's always fun to show up and just play with them all day."

So yes, the series' continued success has just as much to do with the recent break as it does with the cast and crew's camaraderie. Yet Olson adds that their dedication to being as funny as possible, regardless of whatever taboos or boundaries they may be crossing, is also a big part of the success of "It's Always Sunny."

"We just like to do stuff that's unique and different and interesting," she says. "I don't like hearing people say the same catchphrases over and over again. I don't want to see the same storylines over and over again. I have always been drawn to comedy storylines and sensibilities where people say things that I haven't heard before. Or when they take a very common topic and give it a completely different spin. Something I haven't seen before."

Consider the fourth episode of the new season, titled "Time's Up for The Gang." When Olson heard they were going to "[do] an episode about the #MeToo movement," she "got so excited" about the prospect.

"I couldn't possibly fathom what they were going to do with it. Then I read the script and it just fulfilled everything I wanted it to be," she laughs. "This show is so smart, funny and unique. It's also still very relevant to what's happening today. That's just a really amazing combination, and it's really hard to find on TV these days."

Even so, with 13 seasons under its belt, wouldn't it be safe to assume that "It's Always Sunny" won't last forever? Original cast member and writer Howerton left the show after last season, after all, so its inevitable conclusion is a safe assumption, yes?

"When we aren't making each other laugh anymore or it's starting to feel old to us, I think we'll be happy to move on," Olson reflects. "Nobody wants to overstay their welcome. I know they already have their final episode planned out. They won't even tell me what it is. But we're really proud of the show we're making, so I think once we can't say that anymore, we'll all be done."

"It's Always Sunny In Philadelphia" returns Wednesday at 10 p.m. on FXX.

The best bars to watch the Eagles this season

Philadelphia's Super Bowl champs are back in action. Where will you go to celebrate?

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Find your perfect watering hole to cheer on the Eagles this year. KORY AVERSA

Doug Pederson, season opener QB Nick Foles and the rest of the boys in green are back in action as of this Thursday night for the first game of the Philadelphia Eagles 2018 season. With family-oriented celebrations planned at Penns Landing for the reigning Super Bowl champions, where's a hungry and thirsty grown-up Eagles fanatic to get a tasty adult beverage or three? Here's a quick look at our favorite Philly bars to watch the Eagles this year.

Chickie's & Pete's
(1526 Packer Ave.)
The home of crab fries and Fantasy Football Draft Nights has locations dotted across the map, but its location near Stadium Alley in South Philly is the best C&P to get your drink on. That's what it means to have three bars, an 18-foot-high television screen and become an Eagles team promotional partner. Plus, this season, you can buy a commemorative Eagles victory/C&P mug for $9 with $2 refills. chickiesandpetes.com

McGillin's Olde Ale House
(1310 Drury St.)
The oldest operating tavern in Philadelphia is all about the sporting life, with its own brews (McGillin's 1860 IPA, McGillin's Real Ale, McGillin's Genuine Lager), a handful of oversized TVs and a vibe that's convivial, rowdy and downtown-y. Plus, though they advertise themselves as the 'greenest' Irish bar in their country with its sustainability and recycling initiatives, I like to imagine that means Eagles green. mcgillins.com

Get ready for another season. GETTY IMAGES

City Tap House University City
(3925 Walnut St.)
City Tap House Logan Square (2 Logan Sq.)
Not yet ready to take on the local chain fiefdom of Chickie's, these City Tap Houses offer stone fire pits (sounds a bit warm for what is promised to be 90 degree heat that day) and a roof deck on Walnut, great views of Art Museum row outside Logan Square, mega-screens, gastropup culinary amenities and — between them — 100 brews on tap. ucity.citytap.com, logan.citytap.com

Stats on 17th
(111 S. 17th St.)
C'mon, their grand opening in Sept 6, right in time for the Eagles 2018 season. Along with popping its cork on the season, this upscale, 10,000-square-foot sprawler goes two ways: $5 16-oz. Bud Light Eagles bottle during Eagles games for the everyday Joe, projection walls and bottle bar service in VIP areas and 20 HDTVs for all. They're also planning a "stats wall" where photos of top patrons will hang with their key stats and autographs. facebook.com/statson17th

Tradesman's
(1322 Chestnut St.)
If a 10-foot-tall wall screen, open window seating whiskey and new American barbecue doesn't lure you to this new Center City haunt for game day, what will? facebook.com/tradesmansphl

Somo SoPhi
(3101 S. 13th St.)
Philly-born footballer Jahri Evans has played for the Saints, Seahawks and Packers before returning home, where he played for Frankford High as a teen. All of these things combined make him the perfect candidate to open (with wife Takia and Somo Manayunk's James Morrissey) a sports bar lounge that comes with Eagles' green moss as part of its décor. If anyone is throwing a good gamed day opener, it's a baller. They're racing to open for Sept. 6. somosophi.com

4 Adorable cyborg pets

DANIEL CASILLAS MWN

ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

Paro

Paro is an advanced interactive robot developed by AIST, a leading Japanese industrial automation pioneer. It allows the documented benefits of animal therapy to be administered to patients in environments such as hospitals and extended-care facilities where live animals present treatment or logistical difficulties. By interaction with people, Paro responds as if it is alive by moving its head, legs, and making sounds.

Aibo

It is the sixth generation of Sony's beloved companion cyborg. Unlike previous versions, it pairs cutting-edge robotics with a new, cloud-connected artificial intelligence engine and advanced image sensors, giving Aibo the ability to learn and recognize faces. The pet actively seeks out its owners and detects words of praise and smiles. It also react to being petted or scratched.

Zoomer Meowzies

Meowzies are a group of adorable interactive furry-tailed kittens who love to cuddle, play and show their love. These kittens have special sensors on their head, back and chest, so they know when you're petting them. The interactive LED eyes light up to tell you exactly how they feel.

Fingerlings Baby Monkey

This interactive electronic pet responds to motion, sound and touch. The monkeys grab on to fingers, have blinking eyes, turning heads, can blow kisses and talk in monkey babble! Thanks to sensors, they react to being hung upside down by their tails, and will sing in response to clapping.

NIKE ON RIGHT SIDE OF HISTORY

JOVAN ALFORD
Sports Editor

Former NFL quarterback Colin Kaepernick signed an endorsement deal with Nike this week. GETTY IMAGES

Social media was abuzz on Monday as Nike unveiled an ad with former NFL quarterback Colin Kaepernick to celebrate the 30th anniversary of their "Just Do It" campaign.

The controversial ad has a picture of Kaepernick's face and the words "Believe in something. Even if it means sacrificing everything."

As we know, Kaepernick sacrificed his professional football career back in August 2016, when he decided to take a knee during the national anthem before a preseason game. After that game, the former second-round pick explained to NFL Media's Steve Wyche why he did not stand:

"I am not going to stand up to show pride in a flag for a country that oppresses black people and people of color," Kaepernick said. "To me, this is bigger than football and it would be selfish on my part to look the other way. There are bodies in the street and people getting paid leave and getting away with murder."

His explanation was profound and immediately caused a firestorm that would affect the entire sports world, especially the NFL.

Since taking his final snap on Jan. 1, 2017, Kaepernick still hasn't been signed by an NFL team and is currently suing the NFL owners for collusion.

Nike has seen all of this transpire and kept Kaepernick on their roster. They've stood by him and will be featuring the former quarterback on various platforms, collaborating with him on an apparel line, and contributing to his charity, "I Know My Rights."

Therefore, one could say that Nike has done more to help the movement than what the NFL has done over these last two years.

The NFL has found every way possible to distance itself from Kaepernick and cannot find a common ground with NFL players on the national anthem policy.

Why might this be the case? Ratings and money. The NFL is scared to lose viewers on both sides.

Nike, meanwhile, understands the risk that comes with this move, but also understands what it could mean in the grand scheme of things.

Gino Fisanotti, Nike's vice president of brand for North America, spoke to ESPN's Darren Rovell and made it clear the company believes in Kaepernick's stance.

"We believe Colin is one of the most inspirational athletes of this generation, who has leveraged the power of sport to help move the world forward," he said.

While most will hear Kaepernick's message and read Nike's statement, both will, sadly, fall on deaf ears for a select few.

On social media, there are videos circulating of people cutting the Nike swoosh off of their socks and burning their Nike sneakers based on the company's decision to use Kaepernick in an ad.

It is amazing to see how people react when they do not want to understand the message one is promoting, only seeing things through their dingy rose-colored glasses.

It also does not help when you have journalists such as Clay Travis, Britt McHenry, and Jason Whitlock peddling their own narratives on social media about the Nike-Kaepernick partnership.

Travis called it the dumbest move Nike has made in the history of its brand. He also mentioned Kaepernick on Twitter, asking him when he will speak out about overseas workers who are underpaid to make Nike sneakers.

Granted, everybody knows this about Nike and other sneaker companies. But when was the last time Travis or anybody else spoke up about this issue? I'll wait. Once again, it all falls on deaf ears because too few of us think about these things when we pick up an article of clothing.

Then there is Whitlock, who said this whole movement from the beginning has been all about money, that it's a hustle.

Everybody is entitled to their own opinion on this topic because we live in a country of free speech.

If you think about it, Nike is expressing its opinion. But it ruffles people's feathers because there are a select few who think a brand should not endorse a political stance either way.

Will some people boycott Nike and continue to burn their swoosh items out of anger and for social-media clout? Definitely! We are already seeing the impact, with Nike's shares reportedly dropping 3 percent on Tuesday.

However, this is only happening because Nike, with Kaepernick, has decided to stand on the right side of history.

Eagles re-sign Wheaton, Hollins out vs. Atlanta

Philly's receiving corps will look light against Falcons.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

Mack Hollins will be out against the Falcons. GETTY IMAGES

The Eagles are set to kick off the 2018 NFL regular season on Thursday night against the Atlanta Falcons. While we know who will be under center for the Week 1 matchup, the Eagles' wide receiver unit will be something to keep an eye out for.

Heading into this matchup, the Eagles were already without No. 1 wide receiver Alshon Jeffery, who was activated off the PUP (physically unable to perform) list last week. Head coach Doug Pederson was asked about the status of Jeffery on Tuesday.

"Right now, I'm optimistic, but it's week-to-week," he said. "Again, it's one of those situations where we get through this game, we've got another four, five days before we hit the practice field again. We'll make another determination next week. But he's another one that's getting close."

Even though it sounds like Jeffery will be returning soon, the Eagles will also be without second-year wide receiver Mack Hollins for Thursday, who is dealing with a nagging groin injury.

Hollins was the ideal candidate to fill in Jeffery's role in the Eagles' offense. Last season, the former fourth-round pick had 16 receptions for 226 yards and a touchdown.

Therefore, without either guy available for this week's game, Philadelphia decided to re-sign veteran Markus Wheaton. Wheaton was released over the weekend when teams around the league cut their rosters down to 53 players.

He also missed a significant amount of time in both the preseason and training camp with a hamstring injury. However, Wheaton did play in the team's final preseason game last week against the New York Jets.

Over his six-year career, Wheaton is averaging 14.2 yards per reception, with his best season coming in 2015, when he had a career-high 44 reception (79 targets) for 749 yards and five touchdowns.

The former Pittsburgh Steelers' draft pick will be taking tight end Richard Rodgers' spot on the roster as the Eagles placed him on injured reserve. Rodgers suffered a knee injury against the New England Patriots during the second week of the preseason.

With Wheaton back in the fold, the Eagles' wide receiver unit now consists of him, Nelson Agholor, Mike Wallace, Shelton Gibson, and DeAndre Carter. It isn't an ideal wide receiver group for the Eagles, but there is a ton of big play ability.

For Thursday night's game, Agholor should be one of focal points on offense, receiving a ton of targets with Wallace, Gibson and maybe Wheaton stretching the field to open up things underneath.
